CORE COMMITMENTS

Conflict prevention and peaceful resolution of conflicts are recognized as the most durable solutions for saving lives, reducing economic and social losses, and reducing the need for humanitarian assistance, peacekeeping operations or post-conflict reconstruction in conflict-affected regions. However, as new conflicts emerge in places once considered secure and gain intensity or relapse where they were once thought to be resolved, there remains a considerable gap between good intentions on conflict prevention and reality. The failure to reach durable political solutions may prolong human suffering, cause existing conflicts to intensify, or result in parties to tenuous peace agreements breaking their commitments and falling back into violence causing enormous socio-economic development set-backs. Courageous leadership, early response, investments in stability and broad participation by affected people and civil society are pivotal to a recommitment to use political leadership to peacefully prevent and resolve conflicts.

Preventing and ending conflicts and building peace are recognized in the United Nations Charter as the Organization’s first and foremost responsibility to humanity. A collective responsibility, it calls for strong leadership from the Security Council, Member States, the United Nations system, and civil society. The international community must provide stronger leadership in addressing root causes of conflict, as well as strengthening tools, multidisciplinary conflict analysis and partnerships to prevent conflicts from beginning, escalating or re-emerging. The five core commitments listed below aim to move conflict prevention from rhetoric to reality.

The five proposed core commitments for this roundtable are anchored in Core Responsibility One of the Secretary-General’s Agenda for Humanity.

- Core Commitment 1: Commit to act early upon potential conflict situations based on early warning findings and shared conflict analysis, in accordance with international law
• Core Commitment 2: Commit to improve prevention and peaceful resolution capacities at the national, regional and international level improving the ability to work on multiple crises simultaneously.

• Core Commitment 3: Commit to sustain political leadership and engagement through all stages of a crisis to prevent the emergence or relapse into conflict.

• Core Commitment 4: Commit to address root causes of conflict and work to reduce fragility by investing in the development of inclusive, peaceful societies.

• Core Commitment 5: Commit to make successful conflict prevention visible by capturing, consolidating and sharing good practices and lessons learnt.
