(Statement by Minister for States and Frontiers Regions, Lt. General Abdul Quadir Baloch on behalf of the Government of Pakistan: Announcement Plenary)

Mr. Chairman,
Distinguished delegates,
Ladies and gentlemen,

I am very pleased to be here in this beautiful city of Istanbul at the first-ever World Humanitarian Summit, and I congratulate the Turkish government for making meticulous arrangements for this Conference and extending traditional Turkish hospitality.

This Summit is taking place amidst an unprecedented global humanitarian situation. We are witnessing complex crises, which are impacting millions, including women and children, young and old and triggering exodus of refugees and migrants. The root causes of these crises vary from new and old conflicts, wars, persecution and human rights violations, to devastation caused by natural disasters and the impact of climate change. People and communities have been left exposed more than ever before.

Today is, therefore, the time to reaffirm first of all, our faith in paramount principles that underline humanitarian action. We recommit to the centrality and continued relevance of UNGA Resolution 46/182 of December 1991. We also reaffirm our strong determination to try to find better ways of resolving conflicts, of improving emergency response, and of learning from each other the best ways of prevention, assistance and protection.

I wish to commend Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon for bringing humanitarian action firmly on the political radar. The Secretary-General has also set the “Agenda for Humanity” through identification of five “Core Responsibilities” considered to be critical for the UN.

Mr. Chairman,
When we speak at this forum, we do so with knowledge and firsthand experience of relevant issues and challenges – be that as the host of the largest protracted refugee situation in the world, or a country that has shown remarkable resilience in responding to natural disasters, while at the same time building national capacities for risk reduction and management. Besides, whenever possible, we have been extending humanitarian assistance and support to others to the best of our ability and resources. Our support for Nepal is a recent example.

My delegation would like to stress the need for common but differentiated responsibilities in responding to humanitarian crises. While UN should strive for effective and efficient humanitarian action, it should also make efforts to resolve conflicts. Different circumstances, needs and peculiarities of different cultures and situations must be recognized while developing response mechanisms. We must ensure that distinctions between development and humanitarian action are not blurred as it will further exacerbate the situation of countries facing such crises. We should not conflate refugees with IDPs, or migrants with refugees. Institutional arrangements for refugees at the UN should be further strengthened. Role of the states must neither be diminished nor replaced. Rather, states should be helped proactively to further build their capacities.

Mr. Chairman,

We stand ready to continue working together with States and other stakeholders towards these goals. We commit to the objectives and purposes of the UN Charter for pacific settlement of disputes and conflicts. We commit to achieve resolution of longstanding disputes, particularly those on the agenda of Security Council, for durable peace and security in the world. We have also been one of the largest contributors of United Nations Peacekeeping troops, and our troops have sacrificed their lives for the cause of humanity.

We have hosted millions of Afghans for the past four decades. We commit to work for early repatriation of the 3 million Afghans who are still in Pakistan. We must also commit to ensure that protracted refugee situations are neither neglected nor ignored, and are given adequate attention and resources by the international country alongside the new crises. A big chunk of humanitarian aid and financial assistance is being diverted towards the crisis in Europe today. But this should not come at the expense of neglecting other refugee situations. This is a cause of concern for us.

Burden sharing mechanism for refugee hosting countries should be a key priority. Pakistan commits to work for finding equitable burden sharing mechanisms for refugee hosting nations. The international community must do more to alleviate socio-economic burden on refugee hosting countries by finding new and additional ways.

Mr. Chairman,

We see prevention as one of the keys to disaster risk reduction. Pakistan recognizes global warming and climate change as priority areas for effective action. While Pakistan is committed to cope with the negative fallout of climate change, it considers availability of adequate finance as the core of the battle to confront the adverse impacts of climate change.

Pakistan is one of the most disaster-prone countries in the world. Natural disasters have negatively impacted our socio-economic development. Ever since, the devastating earthquake of 2005, and the floods in 2010 and 2011, Pakistan has put in place an effective disaster management infrastructure that focuses on resilience and risk management. Our National Disaster Management Authority, as a lead entity, has done well to respond to calamitous events in the country.

We are integrating gender perspective in disaster response policies. We also commit to empower women and girls as leaders and agents of change. Pakistan is further committed to enhance its national capacities for Disaster Risk Management and to proactively contribute in this regard at regional forums, especially Heart of Asia (Istanbul Process) in the realm of CBMs on disaster management.

Ladies and gentlemen,

2016 is the year of possibilities for global humanitarian system. The decisions we make this year will shape the course of the world for a long time. Here at Istanbul, we are called upon to take the first, crucial step. By bridging differences, by listening to one another and by accommodating each other’s views, we can come up with a robust, focused and more efficient global humanitarian system, while preserving the abiding core principles endorsed by resolution 46/182, to address humanitarian challenges of our times.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.
