Where did your organization stand on these issues prior to making these commitments

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe and its partners have collected a lot of experience on cash programming during the last years, in particular in the whole of Syria context. In 2015, around 14% of our project expenditure was already going in cash programming. We felt, that because of this large engagement, we needed to increase our and our partners’ capacities, competences and quality.

Achievements at a glance

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe has established itself as the key organisation working on strengthening quality and awareness on cash transfer programming (CTP) in Germany. We have successfully concluded a first capacity-building and learning project, including different workshops and a publication (see attached), that aimed to increase the knowledge and awareness on CTP among German NGOs and our key partners. With our partners in the ACT Alliance, we have contributed to further develop the concept around CTP and the debate on strengthening local actors.

How is your organization assessing progress

While we are still in the process of developing a specific monitoring & evaluation mechanism with reference to our WHS commitment which are not a key element of our institutional strategy, we are able to quantify the percentage of our CTP programming.

Challenges faced in implementation

We experience problems in undertaking large international money transfers. In the context of counter terrorism laws, banks have increased their risk-management measures, requiring more and more information on the nature of the transfers. This delays transfers sometimes by more than six weeks. Being more cost effective is one of the big arguments for CTP, and recent developments seem to indicate, that this is driving much of the funding decisions, i.e. their preference for large implementing partners. While this will potentially have a negative impact on other benefits of CTP, in particularly as size creates distance between beneficiaries and the organization.

Next step to advance implementation in 2017
- Improving our internal cash transfer monitoring reporting system to pull out more reliable numbers from the internal project management software.
- Roll out further training in our external structure to increase the knowledge of CTP in the field, in close cooperation with the ACT Alliance.

Where did your organization stand on these issues prior to making these commitments

Community emergency preparedness, risk reduction and resilience are clear strategic priorities for our organisation. We believe that through our implementation model (not self implementing, but through mainly local partners) and the unique access to local and grassroots structures through faith-based networks, we are uniquely placed in working on these aspects. Awareness-raising among our local partners of the need and approaches that can feasibly support communities to address the risks they face, is a critical first step in the process of risk reduction.

Achievements at a glance

Being one of our main organisational strategic goals for 2016-2020, many of our projects already contain elements of community emergency preparedness, risk reduction and resilience. We have also positioned a DRR Adviser at HQ focusing on capacity-building, developing resources, identification and communication of learning and good practice on community-based and household level DRR, CCA and DRM. DKH support the use of guided self-reflections by our partners with their communities to identify the effects, achievements, challenges, lessons learnt and recommendations for improvement. This reflective process developed 4 case studies in 2016 to be used to communicate the effectiveness of DRR approaches to the wider community and stakeholders. Additionally, as members of the ACT Alliance, we have collected and published a range of different cases, which support advocacy on the importance of DRR.

How is your organization assessing progress

DRR is an essential part of our institutional strategy for 2016-2020, and hence we are able to assess the progress through the normal monitoring and evaluation process.

Challenges faced in implementation

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe is working on developing further participatory monitoring and evaluation methods to engage communities and stakeholders in the identification and development of case studies. This includes the utilization of DRR benefit cost analysis.

Next step to advance implementation in 2017

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe has a focus on linking community-based DRM with local partner preparedness and response planning. Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe sees these two components as complimentary aspects required for ensuring both risk reduction and improved response capacities at the community level, for those most affected by emergencies and disasters. Through the ACT Alliance, we will be engaged in the Global Platform on Disaster Risk Reduction in Cancun in 2017.

Where did your organization stand on these issues prior to making these commitments

Having Disaster Preparedness and Disaster Risk Reduction as one of our strategic priorities in 2016 - 2020, and due to our partnership with local actors and the membership and engagement in the ACT Alliance, we are uniquely placed to recognize the challenges that are linked with improving aid to affected people in protracted crisis and fragile environments in our daily work. In particular in protracted crisis areas, but also in other contexts, where natural disasters strike (Nepal) or epidemics occur (Ebola), we have experienced important shortcomings in the past in terms of connectivity of humanitarian and development efforts.

Achievements at a glance

Through different internal working groups, the communication between Bread-for-the-World and Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe has already been improved. We have concluded an evaluation on the process of the Ebola response, and are currently discussing the lessons-learned.

How is your organization assessing progress

Assessing progress will be done partly through future joint program evaluations, but also through the completion of key documents such as policies and guidelines. As this is part of the institutional strategy of the organization, the strategic monitoring unit is involved in following up on the progress, based on relevant indicators.

Challenges faced in implementation

A key external determinant to the success of this commitment are donor policies and regulations in Germany. There is a constant struggle to try to ensure continuity of programming between projects funded by the German Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Humanitarian Aid) and the Ministry for Development. The issue is currently under discussion among the different stakeholders in Germany following the WHS and the commitments done by the German government. Also, challenges to maintain true to the humanitarian principles will always have to be considered in this context.

Next step to advance implementation in 2017

We hope, that the development and roll-out of joint policies (ex. resilience in 2017-2018) will be supporting the achievement of this commitment. Also, we are participating in the relevant working group among the German stakeholders which tries to address the challenges of government funding.

Where did your organization stand on these issues prior to making these commitments

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe is implementing programs through mostly national and local partners. From our experience, achieving real partnership and strong capacities of partners will not be achieved by simply having them conduct projects, but it needs stronger, better targeted efforts related to improved funding, programming and institutional partnership approaches, as much as advocacy efforts to achieve a conducive environment. Due to the low risk appetite of donors to support local actors in fragile contexts, we are conscious about the need to use our own funds to support local actors at an early stage.

Achievements at a glance

As there is still debate on how to calculate relevant figures, we are still very confident that even with a very conservative indicator, we will be able to meet the commitment. We are strongly engaged in the discussion on strengthening local actors through the ACT Alliance, as a signatory to the Charter4Change and within the German Post-WHS process. We have also signed an additional strategic partnership agreement with a partner in 2016, aiming to strengthen their institutional capacity outside of the normal project cooperation.

How is your organization assessing progress

As this is part of the institutional strategy of the organization, the strategic monitoring unit is involved in following up on the progress, based on relevant indicators. Also, together with the other signatories of the Charter4Change and the ACT Alliance, we have been discussing and shaping monitoring and reporting mechanisms on the commitments made in this regard.
Challenges faced in implementation
The challenges to financially support local partners are considerable, if almost the entire resources have to come from private donations. Government funding regulations towards NGOs are very difficult to change, and despite potential willingness and a general understanding of the need for adjustment of the departments responsible for humanitarian aid programming, the risk-appetite involved in investing in longer term engagement of other parts of the government remain low. Providing monitoring through IATI standards has proven to be a major challenge for our IT system.

Next step to advance implementation in 2017
We will aim to increase the number of similar strategic partnerships. Through the Charter4Change, the ACT Alliance and the working groups at the German level, we will continue to drive these commitments.

If you had one message for the annual report on what is most needed to advance the transformation Invest in local capacities, what would it be
Without a clear decision among donor states to accept the comparable small risk involved in additional and more flexible financial support to local and national civil-society, reaching this commitment will not be possible.

Where did your organization stand on these issues prior to making these commitments

Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe's main governmental donors are the German Government (MoFA) and the European Union (ECHO) (total public funds in 2015: 37,1%). In the implementation of our projects with partners on the ground, we are experiencing many challenges linked to the regulations and procedures from these donors. It is a challenge for us to bring partners up to speed with the relevant procedures, and assuring the quality requires a lot of resources at field and HQ level.

Achievements at a glance

This commitment is dependent on the regulations at the back-donor level, which are discussed under the Grand Bargain. Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe is not directly involved in the Grand Bargain, but contributes with input into the discussions through different channels (mainly ACT Alliance, but also VENRO and NGO VOICE).

Since June 2016, Diakonie Katastrophenhilfe is represented at a WHS follow-up working group between German NGOs and the German government, who’s main purpose it is to facilitate accounting and reporting requirements. The working group has met once in 2016. No concrete results for the moment.

How is your organization assessing progress

We are still working on developing a specific monitoring and evaluation tool for a stringent WHS follow-up of the commitments that are apart of our institutional strategy.

As part of our regular partnership dialogue, we are assessing feedback from our local partners on issues related to the relationship on different issues, including the partner’s perception of partnership with DKH. Under this section, we collect structured feedback on issues related to partnership opportunities, technical support for project cycle management.

Challenges faced in implementation

As this stage, the process remains linked to the Grand Bargain achievements, which have not yet produced any tangible outcomes against which we can measure our own asks to partners.

Next step to advance implementation in 2017

- Continuous engagement into the debate and dialogue around the Grand Bargain (mainly through ACT Alliance) and the German NGO Working Group on accountability and reporting.
- In-cooperate the feedback from partners through the partnership surveys.
- Finalization of the internal monitoring and evaluation tool on WHS commitments.
